PREFACE

IT has been found convenient to divide the Catalogue of English Furniture and Woodwork into four sections, of which the present volume is the second.

The volumes are arranged as follows:

- I. Gothic and Early Tudor;
- II. Late Tudor and Early Stuart (1558-1660);
- III. Late Stuart to Queen Anne (1660-1714);
- IV. Georgian (1714-1830).

In the present volume a few examples made towards the end of the 17th century have been introduced to illustrate the persistence of tradition, particularly in country districts.

The furniture of the late Tudor and Early Stuart periods is exhibited in Rooms 52, 53 and 54. Architectural details of these periods are also shown in the West Hall (Room 48).

This volume has been prepared by Mr. Clifford Smith, Assistant-Keeper of the Department of Woodwork. A short introduction has been added by Mr. Oliver Brackett, Keeper of the Department.

CATALOGUE OF ENGLISH FURNITURE AND WOODWORK

Volume II—Late Tudor and Early Stuart
(1558-1660)

THIS Catalogue follows in historical sequence the first volume of this series, and shows the development which took place in English woodwork and furniture between the time of Henry VIII and the Commonwealth. During this period of English history a considerable advance in civilization and refinement of habits is apparent, though nothing like a revolution in taste or manners is found, as was the case after the Restoration of the monarchy in 1660. This gradual development can be traced in architecture, decoration and furniture during the reigns of Elizabeth and the first two Stuart Kings. In the plan of the house the Great Hall was still the central feature, though by the introduction of the Long Gallery used for exercise and recreation, the Great Chamber and imposing wooden staircases, new architectural features are now found.

In the early Tudor period walls of rooms were usually covered with oak panelling formed of small rectangular panels framed by long transverse rails joined at intervals by upright rails or stiles, with moulded edges. A similar scheme was followed during the Elizabethan period, but the moulded edges of the panels became more elaborate and were sometimes applied. Pilasters stretching from floor to ceiling were not infrequently introduced to break the monotony of the panelling, often carved, either with Renaissance ornament in low relief, or with flat strapwork. The most striking feature of the room during the late 16th and early 17th century was the chimney-piece. This was either in wood or stone, and usually carved in high relief with heraldic shields—often the Royal Arms—and conventional ornament characteristic of the time. Sometimes walls were plastered and painted with bold floral ornament, or with figure compositions illustrating romances or scenes from classical mythology.

The furniture of this date, in a broad sense, is characterized by extreme solidity. It was for the most part made of oak, though walnut was used to some extent in the furnishing of palaces and great houses. Ornamental effect was obtained both by carving and inlay with woods of native trees, like apple, pear, cherry, poplar, and holly. Among types of furniture in use some developments should be noted. The chair which in earlier times had been an object of great rarity intended for the head of the household or guests of honour, now began to take its place among common articles of domestic furniture. It was a development of the box-shaped chair of early Tudor times, but fitted with legs joined by stretchers. A distinguishing decorative feature of the period is the heavy bulbous member found on tables, bedsteads and court cupboards. The board and trestle table of the late Gothic period had by the time of Elizabeth been almost entirely abandoned in favour of long solid tables commonly known as 'refectory tables'; another variety of table, described in contemporary inventories as a 'draw-table,' could be lengthened by wings fitted into the framework. The chest remained in favour, panelled on front and sides in similar fashion to the wainscoting, often having applied arches in front enriched with floral or geometrical inlay. A characteristic piece of furniture of the period was the sideboard in two tiers, the upper shelf resting on bulbous supports, the friezes and drawer-fronts enriched with carving and inlay. The court cupboard in which the silver plate was commonly stored was also typical of this period. There is a reference to this type of furniture in Shakespeare's 'Romeo and Juliet', when the servants are clearing the Hall of Capulet's house for a Masque:

'Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate'.

Cupboards and wardrobes were used for the disposal of clothing, for the chest-of-drawers is not found before the Restoration. Great importance was attached to the bedstead, though in some respects the furnishing of bedrooms possessed a primitive character, since washstands, dressing-tables and glass mirrors belong to a later period of history. The wooden structure of the bedstead at the time of Elizabeth was of solid proportion, and often most elaborately ornamented. Foot posts usually had heavy bulbous ornaments carved with gadroons, and the back was often enriched with round arches containing floral ornament in carving and inlay, and separated by terminal figures sometimes of a grotesque character. Rich hangings of velvet and other materials added to the splendour of these Elizabethan and early Stuart bedsteads.

In order to form a true idea of the character of furnished rooms of this date, it is necessary to bear in mind that colour played a much more important part in schemes of decoration than is apparent from the comparatively barren furniture and panelling which has survived to modern times. In the first place both panelling and ceilings were often enriched with colour and gilding. Sometimes panelling was covered with paint with arabesque designs stencilled on the panels. Tapestries hanging on the walls added further to the brilliance of the scene. Cloths were placed on cupboards and sideboards, and supported vessels of silver and gold. The harshness of the wooden chairs and seats was relieved by cushions of many colours and varied materials often enriched with embroidery. By the time of Charles I it had become the fashion, in place of loose cushions, to cover the seats and backs of chairs with upholstery fixed with brass nails, in the manner of the X-shaped chair which formerly belonged to Archbishop Juxon, and is now the property of the Museum. The gilt and painted ornament on walls and ceilings has for the most part been removed or obliterated in the course of centuries, and the brilliant cushions and hangings have perished or faded, but from the evidence of contemporary descriptions and inventories it is possible to imagine the sumptuous effect of furnished rooms in the great houses of the Elizabethan and early Stuart period.

CATALOGUE

NOTE.—All the objects, unless otherwise stated, are of oak.

BEDSTEADS AND CRADLES

501. BEDSTEAD, walnut inlaid with holly and bog oak. The carved and inlaid head-board of architectural character has pilasters, brackets, and inlaid sunk panels; the panelled tester with elaborately carved and moulded cornice is supported by two bulbous, gadrooned and fluted bed posts with square bases and large Ionic capitals. These stand clear of the bedstock, the frame of which has vertical holes for the bed-staves used to retain the bed-clothes in position. The frieze of the head board is inlaid with the initials R.C., and the date 1593.

H. 7 ft. 4 in., W. 5 ft. 8 in., D. 8 ft.

PLATE 1.
316—1867.

This bedstead was formerly the property of the family of Corbet, of Moreton Corbet Castle, near Shrewsbury. The back, in addition to the initials R.C., has carved upon its console brackets a figure of a crow or corbeau, the Corbet crest, which is also inlaid in bog oak upon three sides of the cornice of the tester.

Discussed by H. Avray Tipping, in 'English Walnut-Tree Furniture of Elizabeth's Reign' ('Country Life,' Vol. I, p. 624, 1921).

502. BEDSTEAD, walnut (restored with oak). The head is composed of two rows of three panels, each containing inlaid strapwork within an arch, and separated by eight stiles formed of terminal figures, and above each row of panels is an inlaid band of trellis pattern in poplar and bog oak. The ceiling of the tester is missing. Its oak cornice inlaid in black and white composition in imitation of inlay, is a restoration. It is supported by two detached walnut posts or columns with fluted shafts, composite capitals, and carved vase-shaped bases. Above the cornice at the foot of the bed is a walnut shield dated 1568, and carved with the arms of Strickland, Deincourt, Neville, and Ward, and surmounted by the Strickland crest. The red moreen hangings date from the early 19th century.

Late 16th century. (Much restored.)

H. 9 ft. 8 in., W. 6 ft. 10 in., D. 7 ft. 7 in.

86—1896.

The bedstead belongs to the panelled room (No. 31—1896), formerly at Sizergh Castle, Westmorland, and is further described in an official publication entitled The Inlaid Room from Sizergh Castle (2nd ed. 1928), p. 26.

See No. 635.

503. BEDSTEAD, of box form, inlaid with holly and bog oak. It consists of a head, foot, and canopy panelled and inlaid. The head has nine panels, the centre one is divided into four and has two panels on each side carved with lozenge-shaped designs. The foot has six panels, the three upper carved with similar lozenge ornament.

From Queensbury, Yorkshire. Middle of 17th century.

H. 6 ft. 3 in., W. 4 ft. 6 in., D. 6 ft.

W. 46-1914.

This form of 'box' bedstead corresponds to the type in use in various parts of the continent.

504. BEDSTEAD-HEAD. The upper part consists of two panels, each inlaid in lighter woods with a flowering plant, and surrounded by a framework of dentil and guilloche ornament. In the middle and on either side is a pilaster, carved with an Ionic capital, and leaf, fluted and reeded ornament; at either end is a terminal figure in the shape of a grotesque bird. The frieze at the top is composed of two panels between three brackets; the panels are carved with leaves amid interlacing bands. The lower portion consists of four plain panels separated by moulded stiles.

End of 16th century.

H. 5 ft. 11¼ in., W. 4 ft. 10½ in.

791-1896.

505. BEDSTEAD-HEAD from a low or 'stump' bedstead, consisting of three panels each containing a round arch decorated with guilloche ornament; the stiles are enriched with floral stems and the horizontal rail with semi-circles enclosing leaf-ornament and separated by buds. The posts are each surmounted by a knob.

Early 17th century.

H. 3 ft. 4 in., W. 3 ft. 9 in.

658-1902.

506. PANEL from a bedstead, carved in capital letters with the inscription: YOUNG • ELLUP • PUTTICK • HIS • BED • STED • AND • DOMNI • 1659, followed by a band of leafy ornament.

From Somerset or Devon.

H. 7¼ in., W. 4 ft. 6 in.

Given by Mrs. Graham Rees-Mogg.

W. 4-1922.

507. POST of a bedstead, each face of the octagonal shaft is grooved; the centre, which is sunk, has three moulded bands, the faces of which are roughly carved; the top and bottom of the post are square.

16th century.

H. 5 ft. 6½ in., D. 3¼ in.

Given by F. C. Harper, Esq.

W. 424-1922.

508. CRADLE. Panelled, with carved head-boards. It bears the initials C.B.M.B., the year, 1641, and the day, OCTOBER 14TH. DAI (DAY) (probably the date of the birth of the infant for whom it was made). On each side are knobs to fasten down the bedding. The rails terminate with finials of acorn shape. 1641.

H. 2 ft. 2 in., L. 3 ft. 1 in., W. 1 ft. 10½ in.

PLATE 2.
1769-1869.

509. CRADLE: the head has a hinged hood with arched top supported by turned columns. The back of the head is carved with a fan-shaped ornament, and the initials E.M.G., and the date 1691. The ends have turned knobs, and on either side are three projecting knobs for cords to fasten the bedding.

H. 2 ft. 6 in., W. 3 ft., D. 1 ft. 5 in.

PLATE 2.
596-1886.

CHAIRS

510. ARM-CHAIR ('Glastonbury' type), probably from the sanctuary of a church; the flat back, which rakes backwards, is carved with two round-headed arches decorated with a guilloche pattern and enclosing a conventional flower set within a lozenge. The X-shaped legs and the side-rails of the seat are formed of flat rails, which are joined by bars passing through the legs and the junction of the legs and seat rails and fastened by wooden pins; the arms, held in position by the front bar of the seat, are shaped underneath and ramp upwards to support the elbows.

West Country. Late 16th century.

H. 3 ft. 5 in., W. 1 ft. 10 in., D. 1 ft. 8 in.

Given by Mrs. Graham Rees-Mogg.

PLATE 3.
W. 232-1923.

Probably from a Somerset or Devonshire church. Formerly the property of the Very Rev. Dr. Cowie, Dean of Exeter; and afterwards of Mr. Harry Hems, of Exeter, and of Cecil, 2nd Lord Fisher of Kilverstone.

The model of this so-called 'Glastonbury' type, is the chair now in the chapel of the Bishop's Palace at Wells, which is said to have come from Glastonbury Abbey. (See Bond, F., 'Wood Carvings in English Churches,' Vol. II, p. 115.)

511. ARM-CHAIR of turned ash and oak. Rectangular back with elaborately turned rails with knobs and loose rings; back leg joined to centre of back. Four sloping rails join the back to two heavy uprights which are continuous with the front legs. Triangular seat. The three legs are joined by stretchers with turned rails in front.

16th or 17th century.

H. 4 ft. 5½ in., W. 2 ft. 8 in., D. 2 ft. 3 in.

Given by his Family in memory of the late Walter L. Behrens.

PLATE 4.
W. 24-1913.

Compare similar chairs at : Bishop's Palace, Wells (Bond, 'Stalls, etc.,' p. 115); Harvard College, U.S.A. (Lyon, 'Colonial Furniture,' p. 138); Ashmolean Museum, Oxford (Wright, 'Homes of Other Days,' p. 477); Dunster Castle (Lyte, 'History of Dunster,' p. 380). These turned or 'thrown' chairs, constructed of interlacing struts and rails, carved and turned with numerous knobs and rings, are found in the West Country, the Marches of Wales, in Herefordshire, Lancashire, and Cheshire. They are usually accepted as being a rustic survival of the traditional mediæval chair seen in illuminated manuscripts, in which a memory of the Byzantine form of furniture obscurely persisted. See 'Letters of Horace Walpole,' Aug. 20th, 1761: 'Dicky Bateman has picked up a whole cloister full of old chairs in Herefordshire—he bought them one by one, here and there in farm houses, for three and sixpence and a crown apiece. They are of wood, the seats triangular, the back, arms, and legs loaded with turnery.'

512. ARM-CHAIR; the solid back is formed of a large and a small panel, inlaid with floral scrollwork and birds in holly, cherry, bog-oak and stained woods; the uprights and cross piece enclosing the panels are also inlaid. The back is surmounted by a voluted cresting carved with acanthus, and at each side is a 'ear-piece' with similar decoration. The arms slope downwards and are supported on prolongations of the front legs, which, with the supports, are turned and fluted. The legs are joined below by four plain stretchers. The framing below the seat is inlaid with a band of lozenges, and the upper parts of each of the front legs with floral sprigs.

Late 16th or early 17th century.

H. 4 ft., W. 2 ft. 1 $\frac{3}{4}$ in., D. 1 ft. 6 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

PLATE 5.

229-1898.

513. ARM-CHAIR (BOX CHAIR); the high back, which is panelled, is surmounted by an arch, carved with the date 1574 and the initials I.E.S. below; the uprights finish with flattened terminals; the sides are panelled, the arms are flat and shaped on the inner sides; below the seat (which has been renewed) is a panelled door.

From Newbury, Berks. Middle of 16th century.

H. 4 ft. 7 in., W. 2 ft. 2 in., D. 2 ft. 6 $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

PLATE 3.

W. 134-1919.

The date and initials carved on the back have probably been added later.

514. ARM-CHAIR, with turned spindles in the back and arms, and in the upper part of the back a panel carved with two intertwined dragons or serpents in a moulded framework carved above and below with guilloche ornament. The front legs and arm supports are turned, the legs are united by four stretchers.

From the collection of the Earl of Shaftesbury.

Probably Welsh (Severn Valley). Late 16th century.

H. 3 ft. 2 in., W. 1 ft. 10 in., D. 1 ft. 9 in.

PLATE 4.

W. 115-1924.

515. ARM-CHAIR, inlaid with holly and bog oak; the back is inlaid with architectural designs within a carved and fluted arch; the uprights of the back are inlaid with sprigs of flowers and the top rail between them with floral scrolls and shields, and above is part of a carved cresting. The front legs and arm balusters are turned and fluted; the arms are inlaid with leaves and flowers, and the seat rail with leafy scrolls and flowers. The legs are united by stretchers. Part of the inlay of the back and arms is missing; the pilasters and cresting of the back and the back stretcher are also missing.

From Newbury, Berks. About 1600.

PLATE 6.

H. 3 ft. 8½ in., W. 2 ft., D. 1 ft. 9 in.

W. 458-1922.

The absence of some of the inlay is instructive, as illustrating the technique of the inlay-worker.

516. ARM-CHAIR (painted); the back, which is surmounted by a carved and scrolled cresting, contains two panels, the lower (the mouldings of which are partly missing) surrounded by dentil ornament, the upper carved with arched fluting, and the uprights have stop channel mouldings. The front legs and arm balusters are turned and fluted; the four rails under the seat are carved with flutings; and the four stretchers are moulded above and below and carved with a series of upright channels.

From Yorkshire. Early 17th century.

H. 3 ft. 10 in., W. 2 ft., D. 1 ft. 7 in.

PLATE 7.

Given by T. Mackenzie Fowler, Esq.

W. 216-1923.

The chair formerly belonged to the family of Midgley, of Leeds, and was inherited by the donor, who presented with it a contemporary copy on parchment of a grant of arms to Robert Midgley, of Leeds, dated 1709. (Reg. No. E. 3745-1923.)

The surface of the chair has been painted, evidently in the middle of the 19th century, when the words 'Sursum Corda': 'Johnathan Midgley, 1625,' and the coat of arms of Midgley on the back were added.

517. ARM-CHAIR; the panelled back is carved with a shallow arch and conventional foliage; the top and bottom rails of the back are carved with an interlaced pattern, the whole surmounted by a cresting of double scrolls, with 'ear-pieces' at either side of similar design. The front uprights are formed of turned columns. The seat rail is carved with lunettes; there are four stretchers below.

First half of 17th century.

H. 3 ft. 7 in., W. 1 ft. 11 in., D. 1 ft. 9 in.

W. 34-1920.

Formerly the property of the late Briton Riviere, R.A., and painted by him in several of his pictures. Originally from Gloucestershire, the home of the Riviere family.

518. ARM-CHAIR; the back has two plain panels divided by a moulded upright, the top rail being carved with lozenges and rosettes; the front legs and arm supports are turned, the back legs and stretchers are rectangular.

17th century.

H. 3 ft. 1 in., W. 2 ft., D. 1 ft. 8 in.

Given by the National Art-Collections Fund from the Bequest of Mr. W. W. Simpson. W. 53-1917.

519. ARM-CHAIR, of turned ash, with oak seat. The back, the uprights of which terminate with flat knobs, has two rows of baluster rails, six short and six long; the arms have each a sloping rail with a straight rail and three uprights below. Below the seat are seven uprights resting on a cross rail; the legs are united by three stretchers.

From a cottage or small farm near Byland Abbey, Yorkshire. Probably 17th century.

H. 3 ft. 8 in., W. 2 ft. 1 in., D. 1 ft. 6 in.

1529-1903.

520. ARM-CHAIR; the centre panel of the back is carved with conventional foliage; the tall cresting has double scrolls and foliage, partly in openwork, in the centre is a mask (supposed to represent the head of Charles I), and at either end carved 'ear-pieces'; the sides and lower rail of the back are also carved. The front uprights, formed of turned columns, are incised with the initials E P, and are united below by stretchers. The seat rails are carved in front and at the sides. In the centre of the seat are the initials A C; E H; and the date 1682.

From Thorpearch Hall, Yorkshire. Middle of 17th century; the seat dated 1682.

PLATE 8.

H. 3 ft. 9 in., W. 1 ft. 10 in., D. 2 ft.

W. 91-1921.

The seat was originally upholstered. The present wooden seat, dated and inscribed, is probably some twenty years later than the chair.

521. CHAIR; the back consists of two hooped and scalloped cross rails carved with scrolls and ornamented with three turned drops; the uprights have scroll finials and applied half balusters. The front legs and rail are turned, the side rails and that at the back are plain. The seat is sunk for a cushion.

Yorkshire or Derbyshire. Middle of 17th century.

PLATE 14.

W. 12-1928.

This chair, of a very rare type, of which examples were made only for palaces and a few great houses, was formerly in the possession of William Juxon, Archbishop of Canterbury, who attended Charles I on the scaffold. At his death in 1663 it passed, together with his residence, Little Compton Manor House, near Moreton-in-Marsh, to his nephew and heir, Sir William Juxon, and finally to Lady Juxon, first wife of the Archbishop's great nephew, who married subsequently Viscount Fane. Lady Fane died in 1792, and the chair was then purchased by a member of the Cox family of Birmingham, being later bequeathed to the Moreton-in-Marsh Cottage Hospital by Mr. Sands Cox of Wheelbarrow Castle (see the 'Gentleman's Magazine' 17th December 1794, Vol. LXIV, Part 1; and November 1808, Vol. LXXVIII, Part II). This was reputed to be the actual chair on which Charles I sat at his trial in Westminster Hall, but the claim is founded on a comparatively recent tradition, and on examination cannot be substantiated.

(See also 'King Charles I's Chair,' by Charles R. Beard, in 'The Connoisseur,' July, 1928, p. 228.)

The farthingale or hoop petticoat (French vertugale; from the Spanish Vertugado, a rod or shoot, hence a hoop) which was first worn in the days of Queen Elizabeth, increased enormously in the extravagant court of James I, and this peculiar type of stuffed chair without arms and with widened seat was presumably devised in order that the huge high-hipped farthingale might be displayed to its full extent when its wearer was seated. (For Farthingales: see 'Shakespearian Dress Notes, II. Farthingales,' by F. M. Kelly, in 'Burlington Magazine,' Vol. XXIX, p. 357, 1916. PLATE 18.

342-1905.

The name Nonsuch or Nonesuch is given to early inlaid chests of this type in which the design of the inlay is architectural in character and represents a quaint building with castellations, high-pitched roofs, cupolas and steeples set with vanes, and flying flags.

Nonsuch or Nonesuch Palace, at Ewell, in Surrey, was so called as being without equal. It attained great popularity, and the term Nonsuch was applied to such things as 'Nonsuch apples,' 'Nonsuch lotteries,' 'Nonsuch chests.' The palace was built by Henry VIII, and was given by Charles II to Lady Castlemaine, whom he created Baroness Nonsuch, and by her it was finally pulled down.

(For account of Nonsuch see Blomfield, R., 'Renaissance Architecture in England,' pp. 16-18; Gotch, J. A., 'Early Renaissance Architecture in England,' pp. 33-36; 'Nonsuch and Theobalds,' by H. C. Andrews, in 'Architectural Review,' Vol. XXXVII, p. 59, and Vol. XXXIX, p. 56, 1915-16.)

It is also suggested that the source from which this peculiar decoration on these chests came was Nonsuch House on London Bridge (see Roe, F., 'The Connoisseur,' Vol. LVIII, p. 205, 1920). But there is no reason to suppose that either of the two buildings entitled Nonesuch are represented, rather than any other typical Tudor or Elizabethan house, conventionalized for purpose of design.

566. CHEST. The lid has deeply moulded edges, mitred at the corners; it bears a small shield-shaped silver plate engraved with the initials E.H. The front is composed of three classical arches with fluted pilasters, framed in boldly carved egg-and-tongue mouldings; the stiles, frieze, and bottom rail are all fluted. The sides are divided into two panels by moulded stiles carved with nicking. The interior is also panelled, the stiles being treated in a similar manner; at one end is a till from which the lid is missing.

From Lincolnshire.

PLATE 22.

H. 2 ft. 5½ in., W. 5 ft. 6 in., D. 2 ft. 2¼ in.

527-1892.

The family of Hobson, for whom the chest was made, were tenant farmers on Lord Yarborough's estate in Lincolnshire. A member of the Hobson family gave the chest to the landlord of the Woolpack Inn, at Brigg in Lincolnshire, from whom it passed into the possession of Mr. Edward Peacock, of Bottesford Manor, near Brigg, and at his sale in 1892 it was purchased for the Museum.

Chist is the North country form of the word Chest, and corresponded with the term Kyst.

576. CHEST of elm. The front is carved with flat ornament consisting of bands of gryphons and scrollwork, enclosing lozenges filled with leafage; the ends each carved with two similar lozenges. In the centre of the front is a panel with the initials I.G.; and around the base is the inscription:

BY · JAMES · GRIFFIN

16. THIS · CHEST · WAS · MAD · IN · THE · YEARE · OF · OVR. 39

LORD · GOD · ANO · DO.

The lower edge of the base is shaped. The background of the carved panels have traces of red and green paint. The lockplate, of wrought iron, is of heraldic shape with a coronet and with animal supporters.

Dated 1639.

H. 2 ft. 2 in., L. 4 ft. 9½ in., D. 1 ft. 9¼ in.

PLATE 23.

W. 30-1913.

Said to have been sold from the Old Castle Inn, Old Sarum, Wiltshire, and to have been connected originally with the Pitt family, of Stratford Castle, Old Sarum.

577. CHEST. The lid has a thumb moulding; the centre of the frieze surrounding the key hole is carved with strapwork ornament; the front is divided into three panels by four pilasters carved with flutings and strapwork having shaped corbels above; the centre panel has raised mouldings of geometrical design, those on either side being plain; the sides are divided by moulded vertical stiles and base is surrounded by a moulding of ogee section.

About 1660.

H. 2 ft. 3½ in., W. 1 ft. 7½ in., D. 2 ft. 8 in.

W. 85-1929.

578. CHEST of elm, constructed of six boards; the front is carved with two panels of interlacing strapwork separated and flanked by laurelled bands, below is a border of rosettes, and above the inscription: 'ELIZABETH LOVELL, 1640.' The ends are cut below in the form of a pointed arch. The lid is moulded on the front and back, and the edge of the ends is nicked.

From Shrewsbury. Dated 1640.

580. TRAVELLING TRUNK of wood covered with leather. The top is surmounted by a conical projection for a 'steeple' hat, and bears the date 1649 in brass-headed nails. The interior is lined with canvas.

Dated 1649.

H. 2 ft. 1 in., W. 3 ft. 3 in., D. 1 ft. 6 in.

Given by Col. Henry Howard, F.S.A.

W. 28-1923.

'The trunk belonged to Edward Bushell (born 1604, died 1671), of Cleeve Prior Manor House, Worcestershire. His grandson, Thomas Bushell, inherited his property and the trunk. Thomas Bushell's aunt, Mrs. Gardner, widow of Dr. Gardner, a surgeon formerly practising in the East End of London, was the mother-in-law of Captain Thomas Bowrey, and outlived not only her husband but also her daughter. Thomas Bushell was appointed her executor.

'The trunk contained together with interesting letters, etc., some relating to my family and the Bushell family, an important collection of the papers and letters of Captain Thomas Bowrey

(see Hakluyt Society, Series 2, Volume 12, Geographical Account of Countries round the Bay of Bengal 1669-1679, by Thomas Bowrey) of the greatest interest to students of the late 17th and early 18th century. The trunk was hidden away in a dark attic in the Manor House and I purchased it from the owners of the property in 1922.' (Extract from a letter from Col. Howard.)

BOXES AND CABINETS

581. BOX WITH DRAWERS, with marquetry of rosewood and other woods and composition. Fitted with two short and one long drawer, with knob handles. Decorated on the top with a panel containing a cartouche and floral sprays within a border of floral scrollwork issuing from two baskets; on the drawer fronts, the back and sides, are vases of flowers.

About 1560.

See 'A 16th century Inlaid Box,' in 'Burlington Magazine,' Vol. XXI, p. 13, 1917.

582. WRITING DESK inlaid with holly, bog oak, and stained woods. The top and hinged sloping lid are decorated with an arrangement of bands of checker ornament. On the front, back, and sides are designs of buildings (in the style of the Palace of Nonsuch) within borders of chequer ornament; on each side is also an inlaid eight-pointed star. The lid has a ledge and the front a moulded base. Inside are eight drawers (three missing) with moulded fronts, the framework of the drawers being decorated with chequer ornament in paint in imitation of inlay. Two of the drawers are lined with leaves from a 16th century edition of the Bible in English.

Second half of 16th century.

583. DESK AND STAND. The top of the desk, (which is partly sloping,) and the rest of the surface, is bound by iron bands pierced with scrollwork, the sides being fitted with semicircular drop-handles and the front with a pierced lock-plate. Inside is a compartment containing three wells closed by lids, and three drawers below concealing a narrow upright receptacle open at the top. The four baluster legs of the stand are joined above by rails, ornamented with bands of stamped rosettes and grooved borders, those in front and behind resting on brackets. The stretchers and the four ball feet are modern.

The desk, 16th century; the stand, 17th century.

Given by H. B. Bompas, Esq.

W. 35-1918.

593. MONEY BOX, octagonal, moulded above and below and having a hinged lid with moulded edge. Partly painted in imitation of graining; the front panel painted with the date 1677; the two panels on either side inscribed: 'Remember the Poore.'

Said to have come from Debenham Church, Suffolk. Dated 1677.

H. 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ in., W. 1 ft. 4 in.

W. 88-1921.

594. CABINET, with mother-of-pearl inlay, and painted decoration in gold and silver on a black ground. The cabinet is in two stages, each being fitted with a number of small drawers. In the upper stage the doors enclose a case containing four drawers; when this is removed another receptacle is disclosed, which is fitted at the back with looking-glass and has a floor covered with paper printed in a chequer pattern. The drawers are lined with marbled paper, these linings with the looking-glass being, probably, of later date than the cabinet. The decoration consists mainly of gold and silver floral arabesques, with flowers in vases on the large doors and the sides, the effect being heightened by mother-of-pearl inlay. On their inner sides the doors bear the initials E.W. and a shield of arms—three lozenges conjoined erm—an achievement borne by two families—Gifford of County Devon, and Harrison of Goudhurst, Kent. The doors have trefoil-headed brass hinges and foliated lock-plates.

Early 17th century.

H. 2 ft., W. 1 ft. 7 in., D. $10\frac{3}{4}$ in.

PLATE 26.

W. 37-1927.

This is probably the earliest type of cabinet made in England, and closely resembles an example formerly in the Judges' Lodgings, Oxford (see 'The Dictionary of English Furniture,' Vol. I, Cabinets, p. 150, fig. 2, and the 'Burlington Magazine,' Vol. XXXI.) The decoration is very similar in style to that of a box and a set of roundels in the Museum (W. 30-1912, Catalogue No. 633), also a ballot box, dated 1619, belonging to the Saddlers' Company and bearing the arms of James I and the East India Company.

595. CABINET, painted with floral and other designs on black; in front are doors enclosing seven drawers and a centre cupboard; the pedimented top, which is detached, is fitted with a drawer. The whole of the outside and the cupboard door are painted with flowers, fruit, and birds; the drawers are painted with conventional designs in yellow and fitted with brass drop handles. Partly repainted.

600. COURT CUPBOARD. The upper part consists of two cupboards with doors separated by pilasters (partly sliding and concealing keyholes) and a central panel; the doors are inlaid with geometrical ornament and the date 'ANNO 1610,' and the central panel with the initials A.H.M. The projecting cornice rests on two bulbous supports. The surface is carved on the front and sides with round arches, enriched interlacing borders and other ornament of the period.

The lower part is occupied by a cupboard with shelf, closed in front by two panelled doors; the sides also are panelled. Straight iron hinge bands supplant the original scroll-hinges, of which the marks are visible. The cornice moulding is a modern restoration.

ARCHITECTURAL DETAILS, PANELLING, AND PANELS

634. PART OF THE PANELLING OF A ROOM. The panelling is composed of a series of panels surrounded on three sides by a moulding. The whole is surmounted by a dentil cornice below which is a frieze formed of oblong panels carved with strapwork and floral scrolls with figures and masks. Along the bottom is a skirting border of strapwork. The panelling is divided at intervals by pilasters, the bases of which are carved with cartouche and strapwork, the shaft panels filled with formal scrolls of fruit and flowers, and with figures, terminals, birds and animals; above are Corinthian capitals surmounted by brackets carved with lions' masks. The panelling includes three doors with wrought iron hinges and latches. Also a piece of panelling 3 ft. 5 in. high and two smaller pieces (from below the windows) composed of a row of upright panels, with a row of oblong panels above carved with strapwork and foliage and having a shell in the centre.

Removed from a house near Exeter. End of 16th century.

PLATES 40 and 41.

Total length about 41 ft., H. 8 ft. 2 in.

4870 to 4881-1856.

This panelling corresponds closely with that at Bamfylde House, Exeter (see Museum Negatives, Nos. 32142 and 32143); also with that in the Dining Room at Bradfield Hall, near Exeter (see Negatives Nos. 32285 and 32289).

635. PANELLED ROOM—The SIZERGH CASTLE ROOM. The panelling is inlaid in holly and bog oak with various geometrical and floral designs. The upper portion has a row of arcades, resembling a triforium with round arches; the pilasters have Ionic capitals, and the fluting is coloured black. The lower portion or dado is divided into panels by mouldings. At the top and the bottom and along the middle run horizontal bands of geometrical inlay. The panels are divided at intervals by tall pilasters with Ionic capitals. In one of the corners is the panelled door, forming a three-sided projection into the room. Each side is decorated above with an arched compartment containing a lion's mask, and flanked on either side by a fluted column with Ionic capital. The dome at the top of the door is surmounted by the figure of a boy. The plaster frieze has a repeating floral pattern with demi-figures. The plaster ceiling is enriched with symmetrically arranged ornament consisting of pendants from which spring ribs forming compartments with floral designs, medallions of goats, and chained stags, and three series of shields of arms. The gap to the left of the window recess is intended for the fire-place, and that to the right for the bedstead.

From Sizergh Castle, Westmorland. The frieze and ceiling are reproductions in plaster from the originals still at Sizergh Castle.

About 1575.

This room is the subject of a separate Museum publication.

636. PANELLED ROOM—The BROMLEY ROOM. The panelling is composed of upright and vertical panels set in moulded rails, and divided at intervals by carved pilasters. At one end of the room is a chimney-piece, with carved stone lining, surmounted by an overmantel carved with the Royal Arms of James I. The original ceiling of enriched plaster bears the arms of James I.

From a house known as 'The Old Palace' at Bromley-by-Bow, Middlesex.
Date 1606.

PLATE 42.

248-1894.

This room is the subject of a separate Museum publication.

637. PANELLED ROOM—The HAYNES GRANGE ROOM. Of pine. The panelling is composed of plain boards divided by fluted pilasters with moulded bases and Corinthian capitals, arranged in pairs at intervals. The frieze has the soffit of its lower member enriched with strapwork, and has two bands of strapwork above divided by modillions. Moulded plaster ceiling is decorated with rows of doves in flight, painted blue with red feet. The arrangement of the walls is as follows: (a) Side wall has in the centre a fire-place of stone, the lintel carved with scrollwork, flanked by detached Corinthian columns which support a mantelshelf on which rests a pair of similar columns with entablature formed of a frieze carved with strapwork and pediment above. (b) Side wall, two windows flanked by columns with Corinthian capitals with frieze and pediment above. Moulded plinth with a cupboard door in centre. (c) End walls each with columns and pediment above, similar in arrangement to (b). Outside is fixed a doorway consisting of pilasters supporting a carved frieze.

About 1625.

PLATE 43.

H. 17 ft. 7½ in., W. 16 ft. 1 in., L. 27 ft. 10½ in.

W. 1-1929.

Given by a Body of Subscribers, assisted by the National Art-Collections Fund.

This panelling was found about twenty years ago in a farmhouse in Bedfordshire, known as Haynes Grange, from which it was removed to a house in London. It was taken to Haynes Grange in 1794 from elsewhere. Although no direct evidence exists, it has been suggested that the panelling originally formed part of the fittings of a neighbouring mansion, Houghton House, near Bedford, built about 1615 for Mary Sidney, Countess of Pembroke, who is said to have employed the famous architect Inigo Jones.

Above the mantelshelf is carved the following inscription :

‘Vive Aliis Ipsique Tamen Tibi Mortuus Esto
Quicquid Vitale Est Spiritus Intus Alat
Corpus Prata Domos Vivi Censeto Sepulcra
Ne Vis Peccatis Ulla Sit Inde Tuis
Assidue Moriens Aeternum Vivere Perge
Tetra Dies Multis Sic Erit Alma Tibi.’

638. PANEL. The carving on the two sides, which is repeated so as to form a symmetrical design, consists of strapwork, with swags of fruit and flowers and lions' masks; above is an open vase-shaped ornament in high relief containing fruit and flowers, and on the left, suspended from scrolls, is an urn and wreath, below which is a nude female figure amid the strapwork. On the top are two male figures and two birds resting on a strapwork pediment.

Stated to have come from a house in Canterbury. (Parts of the carving are missing.) Second half of 16th century.

PLATE 44.

H. 2 ft. 10½ in., W. 2 ft.

W. 35-1914.

The carving is closely similar in style to the ornamental details of the famous Elizabethan tapestries woven at the factories set up by William Sheldon in Warwickshire. The design shows the influence of Flemish designers such as Abraham de Bruyn and J. Vredeman de Vries, of Antwerp.

639. PANEL, rectangular, with tracing of arabesque design burnt in. Formerly at Cooper's Farm, Prittlewell, Essex. Early 17th century.

Given by Sidney Vacher, Esq.

W. 39-1918.

653. PANELS (3) painted in oils on oak, surrounded by a moulded framework of pine painted.

The first represents St. Matthew seated on the right below a tree and writing his gospel at the direction of an Angel. On the left is a 'Jesse Tree' with prophets and kings on the branches, and at the foot Eve offering Adam the apple, the Serpent being coiled round the tree. Below: the words 'S. Matthew' with a much defaced Latin inscription.

The second represents St. Mark sitting under a tree with red robe and grey cloak with yellow lining, also writing his gospel. A lion (symbol of the Evangelist) places his paw on St. Mark's knee; behind (left) is a monster with a serpent and skeleton issuing out of its mouth; in the foreground a figure in armour; behind a full-length figure of Christ in the clouds bearing a cross with banner attached surrounded by cherubs' heads. Right: a figure with extended arms and a mound from which skeletons issue. Below are the words 'S. Marcus' with a Latin inscription.

The third represents St. Luke seated under a tree with an ox (symbol of the Evangelist) at his feet. On the right is a representation of the Nativity; on the left, the Crucifixion with the Marys at the foot of the Cross. Below are the words 'S. Lucas' surrounded by a Latin inscription.

PLATE 46.

Each, W. 2 ft. 6 in., H. 2 ft.

W. 8-1928 to W. 10-1928.

These panels were framed up, apparently to form cupboard doors, in the early 18th century. Examples of post-Reformation English religious painting are rare. Amongst paintings with religious subjects and of about this date are the memorial triptychs at Berford Church, Worcs., and at Barford, near Tenbury.

654. PANELS (twenty-five) painted in varnished tempera on oak, with figures representing characters from the Old Testament. The figures are named and are inscribed with texts.

Stated to have come from the neighbourhood of Plymouth. Second half of 16th century.

Each, H. 1 ft. 7 in., W. 1 ft.

W. 39 to 39x-1914.

These panels may have formed part of the panelling of a room, or the decoration of a screen or gallery of a church.

655. PANEL, painted in colours with the subject of Orpheus and the Beasts. The painting is in a circle, the upper part of which is missing. It is inscribed below:

'Such heauenly power in musick rests
it calmes and tames the savage beasts
whilst Orpheus playes
each beast obeyes.'

The lower part of the panel is painted with strapwork, and there are remains of similar designs at the sides.

663. TWO PICTURE-DUMMIES or SCREENS painted in oil colours on wood; one represents a lady with small oval mirror in her left hand, right hand holding her hair which is brown and falls below the waist; she wears a pearl necklace and pendant pearl earrings, hair chain and bracelet; in olive green dress of floral pattern trimmed with gold braid, low-cut bodice, neck-trimmings, and cuffs of white linen edged with scalloped needle-point lace; large white apron similarly edged falling straight to the feet. Feet modelled in wood, right foot projecting, left foot straight to skirt.

The other represents a lady as a housemaid with a broom. She wears a plain green gown, probably intended for satin, the sleeves slashed showing white inner sleeves, the bodice close-fitting, with braided shoulder-pieces, and slightly open in front. Her short, wavy, auburn hair is covered by a close-fitting cap embroidered in black; she has a falling collar and cuffs edged with scalloped needle-point lace and a hair bracelet on the wrist; the large white apron, tucked up, is similarly edged with lace. Feet modelled in wood, left foot projecting.

See No. 668.

670. CHIMNEY-PIECE. The jambs and lintel carved stone, the mantel carved and panelled oak.

Removed from a room on the first floor of an old house in Lime Street, City.

About 1620.

H. 9 ft. 8 in., W. 7 ft. 6 in.

Given by the Fishmongers' Company.

1194-1875.

See No. 668.

See Tanner, H., English Interior Woodwork, Pl. XXVI (measured drawing).

671. OVERMANTEL, formed of two panels of similar design each surrounded by a moulding, and containing a raised rectangular cartouche in an architectural frame decorated with scrolled ornament. Above is a cornice with dentil mouldings.

Removed in 1891 from No. 48 Chancery Lane when the house was rebuilt.

First half of 17th century.

H. 2 ft. 11 in., W. 6 ft. 3 in., D. 4 in.

Given by Sir Hickman Bacon, Bart.

W. 74-1914.

The estate which includes No. 48 Chancery Lane formed part of the property of Sir Nicholas Bacon, Lord Keeper. On his death in 1578 it passed to his third son Edward Bacon, of Shrubland, Suffolk, who presumably built the house whence the overmantel came. About 1790 his male line descendants became extinct, and the property was left back to the then head of the family, of which Sir Hickman Bacon, Bart., is the present representative.

MISCELLANEOUS ARCHITECTURAL DETAILS

672. FRONT OF SIR PAUL PINDAR'S HOUSE. It consists of the oak framework of the front bay windows of the first and second floors, which project over one another. Round the bottom of each bay is a row of panels carved with strapwork, leaves, and masks, the centre panel on the first floor being carved with the arms of the City of London. The pilasters that flank the bays are carved with demi-figures, strapwork, ribbons, and masks, and are surmounted by corbels composed of grotesque masters.

From the "Sir Paul Pindar," a public house in Bishopsgate Without, City of London; part of a house erected by Sir Paul Pindar (1566-1650).

About 1600.

FRONTISPIECE.

H. 22 ft. 8 in., W. 18 ft. 3 in.

846-1890.

Given by the Chairman and Directors of the Great Eastern Railway Company.

The house, with other buildings, was pulled down in 1870 for the enlargement of Liverpool Street Station.

An engraving, dated 1812, given by Dr. Abraham Cohen (No. F. 106-1924); a pencil sketch by J. P. Emslie, given by F. C. Mountford, Esq. (No. 240-1896); and a photograph of the house in situ, are exhibited beside it.

Sir Paul Pindar's tomb in St. Botolph's, Bishopsgate, bears the inscription:—"Sir Paul Pindar, Knight, his Majesty's Ambassador to the Turkish Emperor. Anno. Dom. 1611, and nine years resident. . . . He died the 22nd August 1650, aged 84 years."

See 'Ancient Topography of London,' drawn and etched by J. T. Smith (1810), p. 50; and Wilkinson, R., 'Londina Illustrata' (1819), Vol. I, Pl. 99.

673. DOOR, consisting of four raised panels within a framework, each carved with a rosette and two fan-shaped ornaments. The lock with knob handle are of iron and the scrolled openwork escutcheons of brass.

First half of 17th century.

H. 6 ft. 2½ in., W. 2 ft. 6¾ in.

145-1892.

674. DOOR, consisting of two large panels within a plain framework, each composed of a carved and applied panel, surrounded by four L-shaped panels separated by raised mouldings.

First half of 17th century.

H. 6 ft. 7 in., W. 2 ft. 6¾ in.

146-1892.

675. DOOR of painted oak. Six panels in moulded framework, the surface painted with bold designs of conventional floral ornament on a dark green ground, covering both panels and framework.

Late 16th or early 17th century.

H. 5 ft. 4½ in., W. 2 ft. 4 in.

Given by J. Dowell Phillips, Esq.

W. 38-1913.

The design which is carried across this door is part of the decoration of the complete walls of the room.

A similar instance of decoration contained over the doors of a room occurs at Paramour Grange, West Marsh, near Sandwich, Kent.

676. DOOR of painted oak and pinewood. Eight panels in framework, each panel painted with a cartouche enriched with arabesques on a light blue ground.

Second half of 16th century.

H. 5 ft. 11 in., W. 2 ft. 4½ in.

Given by J. Dowell Phillips, Esq.

W. 37-1913.

677. ARCHWAY; moulded on both sides and with ornamental stops at the bottom. The top has a semicircular arch supported on the inside on brackets each with a boss below and terminating in a split baluster ornament. In the centre of each spandrel is a boss.

From the hall of the Old Palace of Bromley-by-Bow, Middlesex. About 1606.

H. 8 ft. 6 in., W. 4 ft. 9 in., D. 11 in.

248-1894.

See No. 636.

678. ARCHITRAVE of DOOR. The central panel carved in high relief with a group of fruit and festoons of drapery; the ends scrolled.

From an old house adjoining the 'Sir Paul Pindar' in Bishopsgate Street, City of London. Early 17th century.

H. 21 in., L. 4 ft. 6 in.

PLATE 51.

897-1877.

679. TWO COLUMNS and TWO HALF-COLUMNS of carved oak. From the organ balcony of Box Church, Wiltshire.

Early 17th century. (Restored.)

H. 7 ft., W. 10 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

53, 54-1899.

680. BALUSTRADE of a staircase, consisting of six flights and a landing. The balustrading of each flight consists of four or five balusters and two half balusters of square pillar form carved on both sides with Ionic capitals, and strapwork and set between a moulded rail and 'bearers,' which are framed into newel posts carved with hanging laurel leaves. (The treads and risers, which were missing, have been partly restored.)

The staircase was removed from No. 9, Great St. Helen's, Bishopsgate, City of London. This house, which was dated 1646, was demolished in 1892.

Date 1646.

PLATE 52.

Total H. 30 ft., greatest W. 7 ft. 3 in.

154-1892.

A drawing of the staircase by Mr. Philip Norman (No. D 34-1896) is in the Dept. of Engraving. See 'Catalogue of Drawings of Old London,' by P. Norman, 2nd ed. (1913), No. 27. Also W. H. Godfrey, 'The English Staircase,' p. 31, and Pl. XIII.

A photograph of a measured drawing by Mr. E. A. Binstead is exhibited beside the staircase. The 17th century chimney-piece, No. 156-1892 (Catalogue No. 667), and an 18th century chimney-piece, No. 155-1892, were removed from the same house.

681. BALUSTRADING, consisting of three round-headed arches separated by raised stiles and supported on flat-tapering balusters, which rest on a moulded rail.

From an old house at Keynsham, Somerset. Late 16th or early 17th century.

H. 2 ft. 6 in., W. 3 ft. 6 in.

1622-1903.

682. PORTION of a NEWEL POST, carved on two sides. The head is decorated on one side with a man in long robes, and on each of the two sides is a sunk panel carved with a tasselled string hung with trophies of arms.

From an old house in the East End of London. About 1600.

H. 4 ft. 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in., W. 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ in., D. 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ in.

588-1901.

683. BRACKET, in the form of a crouching monster with a man's head, the body of a woman, and the hind parts of a horse; above the hoofs is a volute.

From the front of Sir Paul Pindar's house, Bishopsgate, City of London (No. 846-1890, Catalogue No. 672). About 1600.

H. $20\frac{1}{2}$ in., W. $16\frac{1}{4}$ in., D. $5\frac{1}{2}$ in.

1561-1901.

684. TERMINAL FIGURES (four) of carved pinewood. Found in the cellar of Short's Wine Shop in the Strand, having been preserved there since removal from the older premises in St. Paul's Churchyard, about 1846.

First half of 17th century.

H. 3 ft. $2\frac{3}{4}$ in., W. 18 in., D. 4 in.

38, 39, 40, 41-1905.

685. FRIEZE, consisting of a repeating design composed of a vase between two dragons and two wavy pomegranate stems; between each pair of repetitions is a carnation. The ground is punched. Above is an applied moulding, with a dentil band.

Early 17th century. (Restored.)

H. $8\frac{1}{4}$ in., L. 8 ft. $\frac{1}{2}$ in.

1361-1900.

686. RAILS (five), from pieces of furniture, carved with the following names, initials, and dates:

1. TABATHEY HARDYSTY. H. $3\frac{1}{2}$ in., W. 1 ft. 8 in.

2. OLLIVER FLEMING. H. $3\frac{1}{2}$ in., W. 1 ft. 7 in.

3. T.T. (with a dog or talbot between). 1633. H. $3\frac{3}{4}$ in., W. 1 ft. $1\frac{1}{4}$ in.

4. THOMAS BOCKING. 1650. H. $2\frac{3}{4}$ in., W. 1 ft. $2\frac{1}{4}$ in.

5. SIMEON HALSALL. 1675. H. 2 in., W. 1 ft. $8\frac{1}{2}$ in.

Western counties; 17th century.

W. 393 to W. 397-1922.

687. BEAM, with chamfered edge, the front painted with a design of fruit and flowers in colours on a brown ground.

From Parsons Green Lane, Fulham. Late 16th century.

H. 6 ft. 8 in., W. 7 in., D. 4 in.

Given by Messrs. T. Crowther & Son.

W. 27-1927.

688. BEAM, carved with flutings and inscribed: GOD SAVE OUR QUEENE. Said to have come from an old house at Kington, which was once the mint for the county of Radnorshire.

Welsh; late 16th century.

H. $4\frac{1}{2}$ in., W. 6 ft. 5 in., D. $1\frac{1}{2}$ in.

Given by A. W. Leatham, Esq.

W. 62-1924.

689. BEAM or BRESSUMER (portion), the front carved with a scrolling design of grapes and vine leaves. Removed in 1927 from the front of 122 Fleet Street, City of London.

About 1600.

H. 1 ft. 3 in., W. 4 ft., D. 1 ft.

Given by Professor A. E. Richardson, F.R.I.B.A.

W. 64-1927.

The beam was originally 10 ft. 8 in. long, but the carving being entirely defaced, the beam has since been sawn in half and only part of it preserved. It is supposed that the beam formed part of an ancient building on this site which was destroyed in the Great Fire of London and was re-used as a bressumer in the old position. The property, which was sold in 1927, at one time formed part of the land belonging to St. Bride's Church opposite.

690. BEAM, of elm, triangular in section, the sides being slightly convex; carved with inscriptions in sunk relief along the bottom and each side. On the bottom is the following: WRONGE . NOT . THE . POORE . I . FEARE . NOT . THE . RICH . I . HAVE . NOT . TOOEE . LITTELL . NOR . I . HAVE . NOT . TOOEE . MVCH . I . WAS . SET . VPP . RIGHT . AND EVEN. On the one side: PER . IOHN [and] IOANE SOMMERSETT . SET . YOV . MERY . AND . BE . YOV . WISE . AND . DOE . YOV . NOT . NOE . MAN . DESPISE. On the other side: THE : LORD : IS : MERCIFVLL : AND : IVST : VNT0 : ALL : THOSE : THAT : IN : HIM : TRVST : ANNO : DOMINI : : 1638. The bottom inscription, which is bordered by mouldings, is followed by two heads and a rosette; there is a similar head after MVCH. A wavy stem with leaves and cones comes before each of the side inscriptions, which are further enriched with rosettes arranged either singly or in pairs; each of the side inscriptions is within a border of small lozenges broken at intervals by leaves.

Dated 1638.

H. $8\frac{1}{2}$ in., L. 15 ft. $6\frac{1}{2}$ in., W. $12\frac{1}{2}$ in.

204-1900.

Removed from an old house in Somersetshire by the father of the late owner, from whom it was purchased by the Museum. The house some generations ago belonged to the Duke of Somerset.

691. BEAM, inscribed:

[JO]HN : JEÑINGS : AND : THOMAS : HOAR : AND :
GEORGE : LOW : CHURCHWARDENS.

[JO]HN : WILLIAMS : AND RICH^AD WILLIAMS :
FECIT : 1709.

From Great Tew Church, Oxfordshire. Dated 1709.

W. 7 ft. 7 in., H. 8 in.

W. 38-1928.

692. MASK, carved in the form of a man's head with a high cap.

From an old house in Oswestry. Late 16th century.

H. 9 $\frac{3}{8}$ in.

401-1890.

693. SOUNDING-BOARD of a PULPIT, carved and partly gilt.

From Great Torrington Church, Devon. 17th century. (Restored.)

H. 18 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. by 5 ft. 1 in.

848-1905.

See Murray's Guide to Devon on Torrington Church: 'Henry VIII gave the Church to Wolsey, who after holding the living for some years presented it to Christ Church, Oxford, in whose gift the living now is. Rebuilt in 1651. It contains the carved oak pulpit used by Howe, until his ejection under the Act of Uniformity in 1662.'
